"It's in nobody's interest. It's not in the president's interest, it's not in the House's interest, it's not in our interest," Sen. Richard Shelby (R-Ala.) said of a shutdown.

WASHINGTON, DC - Lawmakers on both sides of the aisle are wondering if they can trust President Trump to sign legislation to keep the government funded and avoid a shutdown before the end of the year.

Read the full story here