

Foxconn: Breaking Up is Hard to Do

Written by Jeff Smith, State Senator District 31

Wednesday, 06 January 2021 11:06 - Last Updated Wednesday, 06 January 2021 11:30

<http://newiprogressive.com/images/stories/S5/foxconn-walker-ryan-johnson-s5.jpg>

Years after Republican leaders and Foxconn executives made a one-sided deal, there's still nothing to show for it, forcing taxpayers to cover the cost. We must negotiate a new deal to properly invest in Wisconsin's future.

MADISON - Over time, relationships can go sour. When it happens in one's private life, the breakup can be agonizing; so much of two people's lives can be intertwined in a short time. When it's a public or business relationship, the breakup can be painful and even more complicated. Most likely, there are legal contracts or properties linking the two parties.

Take the relationship between Wisconsin and Foxconn, for example.

