Would end “corporate personhood” by clarifying that only human beings should have inalienable human rights and money is not the same thing as free speech.

Madison, WI – In the November election, Wisconsin residents in the town of Bartelme in Shawano County voted to amend the U.S. Constitution to clarify that only human beings should have inalienable human rights and money is not the same thing as free speech.

The referendum passed with an overwhelming majority (88%).

That brings the total to 168 Wisconsin communities that have called for an amendment. In total, almost 3.3 million people (58% of Wisconsinites) live in these jurisdictions. Across the country, 22 state legislatures have voted for an amendment, as well as over 830 towns, villages, cities and counties.

"Over half of Wisconsinites have already called for an end to “corporate personhood” and seeing money as a form of speech.”, explained Shawano resident Jan Koch. “It’s time that our state legislators follow the will of “we the people” and put the referendum on the state ballot. The millions of anonymous dollars spent during this election cycle continue to disenfranchise

the average citizens' voice in American governance."

"Our politics has become a money game where only the rich and corporate special interests can ante up to play," exclaimed Bartelme resident Steve Parks. "And, in the meantime, the rest of us are all left wondering why the needs of everyday citizens aren't being addressed."

Resolutions calling for a statewide vote on Citizens United have been introduced into the state legislature (AJR 78 / SJR 61). The referendum would ask voters if they support allowing individuals and corporations to spend unlimited amounts of money on political campaigns.
