Dr. Lyerly Vows to Work Across the Aisle to Rein in Inflation and High Cost of Living, Make Healthcare More Affordable, and Protect Reproductive Rights.

Green Bay, WI – Joined by family members, dozens of community leaders, and citizens, Dr. Kristin Lyerly today announced her candidacy for Wisconsin's 8th congressional district open-seat race to replace retiring member Rep. Mike Gallagher.

Dr. Lyerly vowed to work with Democrats and Republicans, to lead the fight to rein in inflation and cost-of-living, make healthcare more accessible and affordable, protect and expand women's reproductive rights, including access to IVF and birth control, and always put the interests of families across the district ahead of special interests.

“As an OB/GYN, I have been attacked first hand by MAGA extremists targeting a woman's right to make her own health choices. In my practice I have confronted the challenges women face in their ability to access medically necessary healthcare; women suffering from complicated pregnancies, battling sepsis, coping with worsening hypertension and other life-threatening conditions. I will work tirelessly to ensure that every woman in our state has access to reproductive care, including safe and legal abortions, essential services like maternity care, and mental health support,” said Dr. Lyerly. If elected, Dr. Lyerly would become one of the first OB/GYNs in favor of abortion rights to serve in Congress.
