

Key swing-state election lawsuits could help shape the presidential race

Written by The Hill Press

Friday, 18 September 2020 09:24 - Last Updated Friday, 18 September 2020 09:52

<http://newiproggressive.com/images/stories/S5/vote-47-mb1-s5.jpg>

In Wisconsin, residents filed a lawsuit against state officials who forced in-person voting in April. The RNC and the Republican Party of Wisconsin back the defendants.

WASHINGTON, DC - The presidential contest between President Trump and Democratic nominee Joe Biden is on track to be the most litigated election cycle in U.S. history.

With less than two months until Election Day, the voting rules in key battleground states are the focus of bitterly partisan court fights over everything from expanded access to mail voting, the franchise of former felons and restrictions on third-party collection of absentee ballots.

Read the full story here