Trump's media strategy is to make everything personal and political, thereby holding his base. Pelosi isn't falling for it.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) on Thursday lashed out at a Capitol Hill reporter who had questioned whether she "hated" President Trump following her decision to advance the Democrats' impeachment inquiry.

"I don't hate anybody. I was raised in a Catholic house, we don't hate anybody — not anybody in the world. So don't you accuse me of any [hate]," Pelosi said during her weekly press briefing in the Capitol.

"As a Catholic I resent you using the word 'hate,'" she continued. "Don't mess with me when it comes to words like that."
