Website has up-to-date information on the spread of COVID-19 cases, where to get help with unemployment applications, find work, and get testing.

GREEN BAY, WI - State Senator Dave Hansen (D-Green Bay) announced changes to his legislative website to provide more information on the COVID-19 virus and services that “have been put in place to help people get through the pandemic.”

“People will now be able to go to my website for up-to-date information on the spread of COVID-19 cases, to get help with their unemployment applications, their business, to find work and other services to help provide them some relief during these uncertain times,” said Hansen.

Hansen went on to say that the site also contains information on where people can go to get tested along with Department of Health Services’ guidance on how to stay safe.

““There is a lot of information out there both about the virus and the various economic programs put in place to help individuals, families and businesses. We tried to put as much of that information on the site so people will have an easier time finding the information they’re looking for. I hope this information is helpful.”
