

MADISON - This morning, I availed myself of the public comment opportunity at the Wisconsin Elections Commission, and I told Robert Spindell to his face (via Zoom, anyway) to resign. Here's the full statement I then sent in to all the commissioners:

I started off the week writing about Tyre Nichols's death at the hands of five Milwaukee police officers. Here's what I said on that horror:

And during the week, I've been busy handling media calls about the indispensable chronicling that our staff does of the record-breaking money in last November's governor's race. Here's our post, which drew so much attention:

Campaign 2023 ( Updates )

We're about to get buried in an avalanche of outside and dark money for the Wisconsin Supreme Court race. And you can count on us to tally it all up for you.

We make it easy for you to be our eyes and ears around the state and to notify us on ads from these groups (not the party or the candidate committees) via our online reporting form. Help us shine light on dark money.

I hope you find these items interesting.

And I hope you're encouraging your friends and family to vote on Feb. 21 and April 4.

Have a nice weekend!

Best,
