Wisconsin Democrats Offer A Badger State Focused Agenda

Madison, Wis. -- The Democratic Party of Wisconsin's state convention is putting a spotlight on Ron Johnson's failure to represent the Badger state as he continues to vote against his constituents best interests.

"Ron Johnson is the most vulnerable Senator in the country because he has continuously put his self-interests ahead of the needs of Wisconsinites," Democratic Party of Wisconsin Senate Communications Advisor Philip Shulman said. "As Wisconsin families were struggling to pay their bills, Johnson voted against critical COVID relief in the American Rescue Plan. And now he's working overtime to kill the US Innovation and Competition Act -- legislation that would invest in the state's communities and create good paying jobs while holding China accountable for their unjust cybersecurity and economic practices. Wisconsinites are more than ready to deny Johnson another six years of his self-serving agenda."

Background:

- Johnson is just one of a handful of senators opposing the U.S. Innovation and Competition Act, which would allocate billions of dollars for the manufacturing sector and technical training, an investment Wisconsin could use to create good paying jobs and support local economies, as well as hold China accountable for their unfair cybersecurity and economic practices and.
