

Democratic candidates face hard choices as 2020 field winnows

Written by The Hill Press

Saturday, 24 August 2019 11:12 -

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Democratic presidential field is facing its first real winnowing as more than half a dozen candidates confront the increasingly real possibility that they could be left out of the next primary debate.

The fierce competition for money, air time and polling support is taking its toll on the record field of contenders.

Read the full story here