Bradley Foundation spends hundreds of millions to spread partisan apparatus across the country, Scott Walker's rant against Outagamie County Executive Tom Nelson, and more...

STATEWIDE - We welcome the Center for Media and Democracy's Deputy Director, Mary Bottari to discuss their extensive investigation into the Bradley Foundation's "weaponized philanthropy." New recently released information reveals in tremendous detail how the Bradley Foundation has spent hundreds of millions in tax deductible money to build a huge partisan apparatus across the country molded on what they have already done to Wisconsin.

We also review Walker's insulting exchange with Outagamie County Executive Tom Nelson over Walker's statement that he would consider seeking a waiver to re-legalize preexisting condition discrimination.

In the second half of the podcast, we present an in-depth interview with Robert Hickey, co-director of Campaign for America's Future and one of the top strategists on the left, about the political moment and how to turn the resistance movement into political power.
