MIDDLETON, WI - Since announcing his candidacy for U.S. Senate, Russ has visited all 72 counties in Wisconsin to hear firsthand what businesses and workers need to succeed. From Wigwam in Sheboygan to Gener8tor in Milwaukee to North Central Technical College in Wausau, Russ has listened to Wisconsinites who know that we need an economy that works for middle class and working families.

That's why Russ opposes the Trans-Pacific Partnership, a raw deal written in secret for corporate interests at the expense of Wisconsin jobs. Russ believes that we must ensure that both current workers and future generations have the competitive advantage and skills to succeed.

WATCH the video below as Russ highlights some examples from his travels across Wisconsin and shares his ideas for creating an economy that works for all Wisconsinites:
