People see what they want to see as more evidence has piled up about the former president's frantic efforts to hold onto power.

WASHINGTON, DC - New information is emerging about former President Donald Trump's attempts to overturn the result of the 2020 election — including in a Senate report released Thursday.

The accretion of new details makes it starker than ever that Trump's wishes, had they been followed, would have hurled the United States into a constitutional crisis.

Yet none of this seems to matter at all to the GOP grassroots, or to most of the party's elected officials, who overwhelmingly give Trump their support.
