U.S. and other international leaders have said the images of civilians discovered bound, shot at close range, piled in cellars and left for dead on the street likely amount to war crimes.

WASHINGTON, DC - The Biden administration on Wednesday announced a wave of new sanctions targeting Russia's two largest banks, Russian President Vladimir Putin's daughters, the wife and daughter of Russia's top diplomat and blacklisted members of Russia's Security Council.

A senior administration official said the measures are being imposed in alignment with allies in the Group of Seven nations and the European Union and are in response to "the sickening brutality" recently discovered in the Kyiv suburb of Bucha following the retreat of Russian forces.
