Trump wanted the metal detectors preventing people with weapons from coming in removed, saying "They're not here to hurt me", and to lead the armed mob to the Capitol.

WASHINGTON, DC - A young woman previously unknown to most Americans delivered a searing indictment of former President Trump on Capitol Hill Tuesday.

Cassidy Hutchinson, once a senior aide to Trump chief of staff Mark Meadows, laid out a vivid succession of scenes that, if taken at face value, demonstrated Trump's manifest unfitness for office.
