A written transcript of the address is below:

“Hi, I’m Senate Democratic Leader Jennifer Shilling.

“When I look back at the political battles that have been waged in 2018, I’m reminded that our state does better when we all work together. I remain hopeful that 2019 will be a year of growth and opportunity for our state.

“In fact, Democrats are ready to get to work with Gov.-elect Tony Evers to tackle the tough issues - like improving health care, strengthening schools and fixing our roads.

“After years of misplaced priorities, families in Wisconsin want to see solutions. With 2018 behind us, I hope that we can set aside political differences, work together and focus on a brighter and better tomorrow.
